

I am a Modern Foreign Linguist

I am a modern linguist; I seek to explore languages. I use communication skills as a gateway to develop an understanding of other cultures. As a modern linguist, I strive to express ideas and thoughts in another language, embedding the key skills of reading, writing, listening and speaking. I examine how the structure of another language links and compares to my own. As a modern linguist, I am confident, curious and can use my language instinctively in the classroom and beyond.

What is a language? All social animals communicate with each other, from bees and ants to whales and apes, but only humans have developed a language which is more than a set of prearranged signals. Human speech is rational and organised sound and meaning. There are about 5000 languages spoken in the world today. Languages are linked to each other by shared words or sounds or grammatical constructions. The theory is that the members of each linguistic group have descended from one language, a common ancestor.	Languages are tied to cultures and through linguistic study, cultures can be further understood. Language can be understood and communicated through reading, writing, speaking and listening. Language is formed as sounds, words and structures: phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics and pragmatics. Learning a language requires the opportunity to match and express new sounds and words within structures to a person's current understanding of the world.
